Continuation of Testimony for the Prosecution in the Tweed Trial.

MR. TWEED'S BANK ACCOUNT

One Hundred and Ninety Exceptions Interposed by the Defence.

Frank Daniel was brought before Commissioner Shields yesterday and charged with stealing $2 50 from Charles Banners on the steamboat City of New York while she was on her voyage to Hartford on Thursday night. Joseph Malcomson and Julius Clemensen, sailors, were yesterday held by Commissioner Shields to await the action of the Grand Jury on a charge of having mutinied on board a vessel at sea.

Anthony J. Woodruff, No. 30 North Moore street. was vesterday held by Commissioner Osborn in $2,000 bail for examination on a charge of selling unstamped cigars.

A motion was made yesterday before Judge Sedgwick, holding Superior Court, Special Term, to ontinue the suit of ex-Chamberlain Palmer against John Foley without costs. The ground of the motion was that the city charter took away from the suit its previous vitality through legislaring Mr. Palmer out of office. In opposition it was urged that the suit having been brought in good faith, no legislative action could be a bar to costs. Judge Sedgwick took the papers.

THE TWEED TRIAL.

Overhauling Mr. Tweed's Bank Ac Tilden Reopening His Budget of Facts and Figures-One Hundred and Ninety Exceptions by the Defence-John Garvey on His Brother Andy's Sojourn in Hoboken.

There was another rather slim attendance yes. terday at the trial of William M. Tweed. The farce. as many choose to call it, thinking it unworthy a higher place in dramatic representation, does not draw as well as on its first production. This may be owing, perhaps, to there being no change in the dramatis personæ. The detence are calling the same witnesses, and, of course, they have each the same story to tell. No new facts were developed in yesterday's testimony, and had it not been for the occasional interchange of pleasantries between the counsel and John Garvey's rather amusing recital of his brother Andy's sojourn in Honoken previous to setting out on his more extended trip of foreign travel, the day's proceedings would have been of the dullest imaginable character. Meantime the cool and self-possessed bearing and demeanor of the great "ex-Boss" remained un-Most of the day he was occupied in writing, as if having a voluminous correspondence to attend to, but during the examination of John Garvey he was all attention, and shook his plethoric sides with laughter with as hearty gusto as any of the rest.

DEPUTY COMPTROLLER STORES RECALLED.

The proceedings opened with recalling Deputy The proceedings opened with recalling Deputy Comptroller Storrs. In answer to counsel for the defence he said he meant to testify on the previous day that there were instances in which he did not see the signature of the defendant on the certificates of audit which he inspected in company with the Mayor. He could not tell whether the name was on the Vencher when not on the certificate. A number of objections ruled upon the day previous were reviewed by counsel for the defence, and ruled upon, as extending to all nuture branches of the Case. A new objection was made against proof of Pay offences after July 13, 1870, when the old Board of Supervicers went out of office. The objections were disallowed.

After some further discussion the account was admitted, and so was Mr. Garvey's, the Court boilding that, even if the accounts were false, if they were shown to be mere conduits to transfer moneys to Mr. Tweed, they were admissible. The Keyser & Co. warrants were shown him, and he said, as to the first, that there was the cut of the receiving teller; an E. A. W. was on the back, in the receiving teller's handwriting; there was a difference between his cut and the other teller's, showing it was received, on deposit. As to the others, he testified there was the same cut through the memorandum on the back as was sometimes made by the assistant receiving teller; he then examined the other iso warrants; some of these had not the cut of the receiving teller; he then examined the other iso warrants; some of these had not the cut of the receiving teller; he had taken part in the examination by Mr. Tilden of the accounts and deposit tickets, and so far as he compared them they corresponded exactly; that covered Tweed's accounts, Ingersoll's, Woodward's and Garvey's. The witness here explained how the entries were made in the books of the bank, and that the only way of certainly tracing the items of a ueposit was by the deposit bickets.

To Mr. Root—Heft the Broadway Bank in March last; I was occupied two weeks in my first investigations and have been repeatedly called on since before the grand and petit juries; I am now in the Comptroller's office; there was no understanding when I made these examinations; I knew the handwriting on the tickets by their general appearance; I did examine them with reference to the handwriting, but not, I think, Garvey's or Ingersoll's: Mr. Woodward's tickets were in his handwriting.

Mr. Peckham here offered the entries on the blot-ters for each day on which ledger entries were made, and the same were admitted under objec-tion.

Mr. Draper, secretary of the Grand Jury in November, 1871, was called to prove the loss of the deposit tackets, but could not remember that they were before the Grand Jury, nor what was done with them.

with them.

Mr. Alien, Assistant District Attorney, testified that he had searched and caused search to be made in every place where he thought these deposit tickets were at all likely to be found in the District Attorney's office, and had not found them. He had not seen them that he remembered, and did not believe that they had ever been in the District Attorney's office.

He had not seen them that he remembered, and did not believe that they had ever been in the District Attorney's office.

Mr. John L. Everett, cashier of the Broadway Bank, testified that the deposit tickets covering these four accounts had been selected by Mr. Tilden and other gentlemen, and they afterwards disappeared; the deposit tickets accompanied every deposit in the bank, and were generally kept in the vaults for about six years.

WOODWARD'S DEFOSITS IN TWEED'S NAME.
Ansel E. Parkurst, receiving teller in the Broadway Bank in 1870, testified that Garvey, Woodward, Tweed and Ingersoli kept accounts in the bank; the endorsement on the back of a warrant shown him of "E. A. Woodward" was made by himself and indicated that it was deposited to the credit of Woodward; Keyser & Co. were the payees in the warrant and their endorsement was in blank; Woodward made deposits in the bank in the name of Tweed; he took the deposit tickets to the Crand Jury room in 1871 and had not seen them since.

Tilden, who was the next witness called, testified that he was a practising lawyer in this city, and in the fait of 1871 examined the secounts of Tweed, Ingersoll, Garvey, Woodward and the New York Printing Company, in the Broadway Bank, and made a table of the decits and credits of these accounts, and of certain relations which they bore to each other; the first column of the table states the date of the transaction or the warrant; the next the date of the deposit penerally corresponded, but not always; the next is the number of the warrant, and the next the name of the last endorser, who is generally the depositor; the next shows the amount of the warrant; the entries in the columns are derived from the books in the Comptroller's office, and the others from the accounts of the Broadway Bank; the deposit fickets contained the particulars of the entries in the ledger when a credit was composed of more than one item of deposit.

A dispute here arose as to whether the warrants were in evidence, and finally counsel for the defence got in an excention to each one—150 exceptions altogether. A special exception was taken to two warrants on the ground that they were antedated to the audit alleged in the Indictment, one being a Garvey and the other being an Ingersoil warrant, and both the vouchers being lost.

After recess the examination of Mr. Tilden was resumed. There was a long discussion over a supplementary paper headed "Miscellaneous entries." produced by witness, and after an objection by counsel for the delence that there was a sult for $1,000,000 against defendant, and that if he owed it he would pay every dollar out of his pocketbook, which goes with him wherever he goes, the paper was admitted.

A paper containing a summary of the items was then nanded in. FURTHER EXAMINATION OF MR. TILDEN.

A paper containing a summary of the items was then handed in.

Counsel for the defence rigorously protested against that printed paper. He should like to print something himself—print his case and hand it up to the fury.

Mr. Tremain remarked that there was no objection in the Pennsylvania coal case, in which Mr. Tilden was counsel. A large number of papers were condensed, and the result handed to the upry.

Counsel for the Defence—Mr. Tweed has given $1,000,000 bail, and if there is any judgment against him he will pay it.

Mr. Tremain—Now, is it fair for you to sum up in homeopathic doses?

Counsel for the defence langhed and sat down.

Mr. Tilden next testified that the transfers from Woodward's, Garvey's and Ingersol's accounts to Tweed were, on the average, 24 per cent; these items on Tweed's account to which he testified appear to have passed through Woodward's account; when there was a deposit of 66 per cent 24 per cent went to Tweed; Tweed's account corresponds with the debit of Woodward's made on or about the same day.

Mr. Tilden was only asked a few questions on his cross-expanination by Mr. Fullerton. He said it was casually he took up the matter; Mr. O'Connor had commenced the coal suit, and he casually met Mr. Tweed in Albany; Mr. Tweed said there was a regiment of counsel at the other side, and asked him to examine the Keyser accounts; while doing so he saw a connection between them and other accounts.

MR. GARVEY ON THE STAND.

John Garvey, brother of Andy, testified that in the fall of 1871, while his brother was in Europe, he went to see Mr. Tweed about money matters; in the conversation he said to Mr. Tweed that it was rumored Sampson had gone to Europe aiter Andrew; Mr. Tweed answered he had not gone after Andrew, but it was better that Andrew and he should not meet and that he should send him word to that effect; he also said Andrew was away and Woodward was the only man he was alraid of; that Jimmy (Ingersoll) was all right, and that for himself he was going to stick.

adjudged a bankrupt upon the petition of Messrs. Cochran, McClean & Co., his creditors, filed January 11, 1873. In the proceedings subsequently taken James H. Moran was chosen assignee. Be fore this time and on the 11th of December, 1872, Haddock, as is alleged, executed two deeds, under which, it is claimed, he absolutely conveyed to one Benjamin Browne certain real estate at Mount Vernon, Westchester county, of which he was the owner, and Browne, it is further alleged, in two or three days subsequently, reconveyed the property to Mrs. Haddock, wile of Isasc Haddock. The assignee thereupon brought a suit to set aside these conveyances, and claimed that at the time of the execution of the deeds isaac Haddock was pecuniarily embarrassed; that he was obliged to borrow money to use in his business; that some of his accounts were overdue and unpaid; that there was no consideration for any of the deeds, and that they were made, as the assignee alleged, so that the title to the property and a presumption ownership would not be in him and to provent a which, it is claimed, he absolutely conveyed to one setzure of the property by creditors in case of intrastion. It is further charged that Mrs. Haddock knew all these circumstances when she accepted the deeds; but she maintained that the same were executed for the benefit of the inant children of the deceased wife of Mr. Haddock. On this point, however, counsel for the assignee held that if any such trust existed it was void as against creditors under part 2, chap. 1, article 2, Revised Stanties. The matter having been argued yesteroay on the pleadings and proofs by Mr. G. A. Seixas for the assignee and Mr. John Flanders for the defendants, the Judge ordered that the deeds should be set aside, declared that the assignee was entitled to the property, subject to the wife's right of dower, and ordered that she should restore the same to the assignee.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15, 1873. No. 92. Lasére vs. Rocherson et al.-Error to the Supreme Court of Louisiana.—This was an action brought by Lasére against different parties to set aside certain judgments and the proceedings under them, by which they had been given possession of his property in New Orleans. The facts, as stated by Lasere, are, that he was a resident of New Orleans and Clerk of the Supreme Court of the State for that district, and had been such for years before the war and at the time of the capture of New Orleans by the federal arms; that, although there was no charge of any sort against him, and although he had not been in the military service, he was compelled to leave New Orleans and go beyond the lines by the Provos: Marshal of the Department, under orders of Generals Butler and Banks, and dared not return; that while so absent the proceedings complained of were taken against him without notice, and his property was confiscated by the provisional courts of that district. The Court below sustained the proceedings, and the judgments—there were originally two cases—were for those in possession of his property. The writ of error maintains that the order of banishment, as it is called, excused the non-appearance of Lasfre and interposes the statute of limitations between him and the proceedings are also void, because the curator ad hoc, appointed by the Court, did not perform his duty, and could not, by nothlying Lasfre of the proceedings and inviting him to defend them. It is said that as the plaintiff could not appear and defend the case, because forcibly sent beyond the lines into the enemy's country, the proceedings against him were nuil, because the writ of summons was nugatory and the curator was under a disability to periorm the duties of his office. There being a division below on the question of bankruptcy involved, it is certified to this Court for answer, and it is contended by the assignce that the failure of the firm to pay, the commencement of the suit and subsequent proceedings were sufficient to give the bank notice of the bankruptcy and insolvency of the firm, and that by their not advising other creditors of the commencement of the suit it is evident there was an intention to fraudatiently prefer the bank by the firm; and that under such circumstances the bank is not in a position to claim the fund, and should not receive it. The bank maintains that mere honest inaction in a poor man, when his creditor seeks by law to collect a debt, is not in itself an act of bankruptcy, and that there is nothing more than this shown in the case to establish a iraudulent intent. The intent, it is irred, is as much a lact to be oroven as the transier or the suffering or procuring the property to be taken, and that if the intent is to be inierred from the transier, then the qualifying words of the act. THE NEW POLICE JUSTICES.

Constitutionality of the Court of Special Sessions Discussed Yesterday-The New Justices Among the Doubters-Are Its Convictions Invalid !

This Court opened yesterday morning. The justices on the bench were Justices Bixby, Warwell and Otterbourg. Several cases of petit larceny and assault and battery were tried and disposed of, when the name of Bernard Winsler was called, charged with stealing a knife, valued at $5, from George Lorey. The prisoner was placed at the bar and called on to plead. Counsellor William F. Howe rose and said:—"This defendent desires, or rather I do-with the utmost respect to the Court and without expressing any opinion as to the beneats which the public may or may not derive from the change which the Legislature has

After listening to the harangue of counsel Judge Bixby quietly said to the Cierk, Mr. Johnson, "Enter a plea of not guilty."

Mr. Howe, rising suddenly and in a loud voice, said. "The prisoner does not plead, and we except to the Court ordering that plea to be interposed." The Court, however, proceeded with the trial of the prisoner, Winsler, and jound him guilty, and sentenced him to five days in the City Prison.

Later during the session of the Court the case of Char'es Cropper, charged with stealing an overcoat from John C. Rushton, the druggist in Barclay street, was called. Mr. Howe again rose as counsel for the accused.

Mr. Howe—As a matter of form, which the Court will understand, I desire the stenographer to note the protest which I made in the former case, that this Court has no jurisdiction. The prisoner then declined to plead.

Judge Bixby—Then you do not elect to be tried before this Court under the statute?

Mr. Howe—We elect to be tried by a Court of Special Sessions.

Judge Otterbourg (interposing)—We will transfer the case to the General Sessions.

Mr. Howe—Wo have no power to send it to the General Sessions, because the prisoner has now elected to be tried by a Court of Special Sessions.
